Cooley's Anemia Foundation

Background

Since 1954, the Cooley's Anemia Foundation has fought to improve and save the lives of those afflicted with the various forms of thalassemia.

Children born with thalassemia must endure a painful and difficult treatment routine. Every two weeks units of red blood cells must be transfused into our children to maintain life. Each day their medication must be mixed, loaded into a syringe, and infused through a pump for ten hours to remove toxic iron received from chronic blood transfusions.

Mission Statement

The Cooley's Anemia Foundation is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to funding research, educating the public and the medical community, and providing support for those whose lives have been touched by thalassemia.

Goals and Strategies

- Funding research to improve the treatment, care and cure of thalassemia
- Providing patients and their families with support, education, and timely information on thalassemia
- Increasing public awareness about thalassemia
- Working with public policy makers to change the course of this disease
- Working with national and local media to draw attention to the incidence of thalassemia
